

Paul F. Cranefield Award

Nomination Form

The Paul F. Cranefield Award was created by the Council of the Society of General Physiologists to honor Paul F. Cranefield, M.D., Ph.D., who for 30 years served as Editor of The Journal of General Physiology. The Award is meant to recognize an independent young investigator who in the preceding calendar year has published an outstanding article in the Journal. It further was stipulated that the Award criteria should be such that the Award need not be given every year. The Awardee is selected by the Society's Council based on nominations submitted by the Society membership and the editors of the Journal. Nominations, including a brief evaluation of the article and why it is deemed to be outstanding, should be sent to the Society's Executive Office at
